Announcement was made yesterday that Joe Foster had purchased the interest of Ed. W. Pipkin in the Normal Grocery store thereby making Mr. Foster the sole proprietor of that business. Mr. Foster announces that he will employ additional men in order to take care of the large and increasing business being Mr. R. B. Redfearn, a well known citizen of this city, who will take charge of the book-keeping department also. Joe has had many years of experience in both the wholesale and retail grocery business and solicits a continuance of the patronage of the buying public.

Mrs. J. C. Mann of Happy is a Canyon shopper Tuesday. L. Gentry was in Canyon Tuesday from Kansas City. P. F. Thomas was in town Tuesday from Roswell. John McLean of Clarendon is in town Tuesday.

A Shaking Up

may all be very well as far as the trusts are concerned, but not when it comes to chills and fever and malaria. Quit the quinine and take a real cure—Ballard's Herbine. Contains no harmful drugs and is as certain as taxes. If it doesn't cure you get your money back. For sale by Thompson Drug Co., The Leading Druggist.

While it is often impossible to prevent an accident, it is never impossible to be prepared—it is not beyond any one's purse. Invest 25 cents in a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment and you are prepared for sprains, bruises and like injuries. Sold by City Pharmacy.

Warn Out

That's the way you feel about the lungs when you have a hacking cough. It's foolishness to let it go on and trust to luck to get over it, when Ballard's Horehound Syrup will stop the cough and heal the lungs. Price 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Sold by Thompson Drug Co., The Leading Druggist.

An attack of the grip is often followed by a persistent cough, which to many proves a great annoyance. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been extensively used and with good success for the relief and cure of this cough. Many cases have been cured after all other remedies had failed. Sold by City Pharmacy.

Arrested

a cough that has been hanging on for over a month by taking Ballard's Horehound Syrup. If you have a cough, don't wait—stop it at once with this wonderful remedy. Splendid for coughs cold on chest, influenza, bronchitis and pulmonary troubles. Price 25c, 50c and $1.00. Sold by Thompson Drug Co., The Leading Druggist.

RETRIBUTION.

By PHILIP ATTERBURY.
[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

I was at work at my easel one morning when I received a visit from a lady who was a perfect stranger to me. I arose to receive her and was about to ask her how I could serve her when she said eagerly: "Where is Edward Borland?" "Edward Borland?" "Yes. Do you know where I can find him?"

"I never heard of the gentleman." "You painted the picture 'Retribution,' didn't you, on exhibition at Martine's?" "I did."

"From what did you take my likeness? I never sat for you." "My good lady, will you explain?" "Explain! Why borrow my feelings by forcing me to tell the distressing story when you must know it already. Else how could you have painted that awful scene?"

"What awful scene?" "Do cease the pretense of ignorance. I suppose it was he who told you."

My bewilderment was increasing rather than subsiding, for I noticed a resemblance, though a very faint one, between the lady before me and a figure in the picture to which she referred. In fact, I was dumfounded. I did nothing but stare at her. She went on speaking in her quick, excited way, her eyes filling with tears:

"It was all my fault. I urged him to take the money and speculate for me. The stocks went down. Ten days after the loss was reported to me by the brokers he had learned of it and made it good out of his own pocket. Indeed, he wrote me that there was a profit. The stupid brokers called on me for margin during his absence, at the height of the panic. He had distinctly told them to look to him and by no means communicate with me. But why did you call your picture 'Retribution?' At the moment I reproached him he had ordered a check sent me for $8,000. I received it after he had gone."

A light was beginning to break in upon my brain. I had read of cases where persons had fancied themselves the subjects of artists' work, and it struck me that I had met with an instance. I was interested in the lady's story. Might I not be of service in restoring to her a person she had wronged? The picture, too, corresponded with the scene to which she referred. A woman was reproaching a man who had wronged her, while he stood with bowed head, receiving his chastisement. The woman was the principal figure; the man was in shadow and his face not distinctly visible. I concluded to temporize with her.

"And did he not defend himself?" I asked. "No; he simply stood and looked at me in astonishment. His figure in your picture doesn't show his demeanor at all."

"He left you with no explanation?" "None whatever. Ten minutes after his departure the postman left his letter containing his check for what I had given him—the profit. Profit, indeed! The transaction cost him $7,500."

I pondered, while she went on incoherently in the same manner as before. Finally I said to her, "If you will leave me your address I will see if I can do anything for you." "There! I knew all the while you were acquainted with him and that he gave you the information which led to your painting that picture. Oh, please do tell him how sorry I am for what I did."

"Yes, if I find him." The lady departed somewhat comforted, but by no means confident that I would succeed in gaining for her the forgiveness of the man she had wronged.

How I found Edward Borland is a matter between me and a man I paid for doing the work. When I met Mr. Borland he supposed the meeting was casual. I pursued the acquaintance and invited him to my studio, where I had the picture from Martine's conspicuously displayed on an easel. I watched him as he looked at it. The woman's face evidently interested him.

"Where did you get your model for that figure?" he asked. "This was a beginning. Before he left my studio I had told him the story of my visitor and her illusion. When his wonder at the singular occurrence had given place to thinking on the situation between himself and the lady I saw his face harden. If I effected a reconciliation I must use the utmost adroitness."

"She was very bitter," he said, "when she supposed I had lost her money."

"Naturally," I remarked. "She gave me carte blanche to do as I thought best for her, to win or lose as the market rose or fell, and when it fell she reproached me."

"As was to be expected from any woman and as would be the result in the case of most men. Women don't possess the poise to stand that sort of thing. Granting that you were excusable for accepting such a commission, you could only expect that it would be heads you win, tails you lose."

Before he left I secured his promise to meet the lady in question in my studio the next morning. I notified her to come, and she no sooner saw her former lover there than I, as an artist, caught the penitent, pleading look on her face for my next picture. I marked the first "Retribution I," and the second "Retribution II."

When my friend Mrs. Borland got obstreperous her husband tells me that I had better paint a third picture with him in the foreground and call it "Retribution III." His wife fails to understand why.

A Lively Office.

In his recollections in Blackwood's Magazine Sir Robert Anderson tells an amusing story of the days when he was employed at the home office. On his arrival one morning at the office he found a note from Sir James Ferguson's private secretary—his intimates called him "Creep"—announcing that at 3 o'clock precisely an old hat, lately the property of the chief clerk, would be kicked off from the end of the corridor and requesting the favor of Sir Robert's presence. When Big Ben struck 3, Sir Robert heard Creep's cheery voice ring out, "All on side, play!" They all turned out and the game began. On emerging from an unusually hot scrimmage Sir Robert became conscious of the presence of a stranger at his side, a timid little Frenchman, who meekly inquired, "Is ziss ze office for ze naturalization?" Sir Robert adds, "It was!"

Why He Cried.

The sympathetic neighbor asked: "Is your little brother ill this morning, Johnnie? I heard him crying in the most heartrending manner." "No; not exactly," Johnnie explained, "but Willie pulled down a jug of molasses on himself in the pantry, and mother has been trying to comb his hair."—Exchange.
